REALM WORKERS

By Geoffrey Hoppe

Adamus says the other realms are bustling with activity as we come closer to Heaven's Cross on March 22. Angelic beings are making final preparations. Members of our celestial counterpart, the Crimson Council, are monitoring the consciousness and energies of our planet with intense interest. Shaumbra that have crossed over in the past few years are focused on the connections between the other realms and Shaumbra still on the planet. Adamus, Tobias, Kuthumi and thousands of ascended masters are working with us closer than ever, knowing the importance of the event and knowing that it presents special challenges for us right now.

At the end of the most recent Keahak session, Adamus addressed the issue of doubt, saying that we could not afford the luxury of doubt, but also acknowledging that it is going to be one of the biggest issues in our lives right about now. Doubt comes up now because we've been preparing for the Apocalypse for thousands of years. Part of us wonders if it's now actually for real. There have been many carrots and promises and false starts in the past; many fallacious gurus with their claims of the Promised Times. No wonder we doubt that this is it. We've had our expectations inflated, only to be burst.

I've had some long and serious talks with Adamus about Heaven's Cross. "You've laid it all on the line, Most Honorable Adamus. You're even calling this the Apocalypse. You're basically giving it biblical status."

"And your point is...?" replied the self-appointed president of the Ascended Masters Club.

"What if nothing happens?" I asked innocently. In that moment I thought I heard loud thunder in the background and then realized it was Adamus laughing so loud that he was shaking up the heavens. I continued. "I'm glad you think it's funny but based on everything you said in the Shouds and Keahak, and Heaven's Cross Part 1 and Part 2, this is it.

I didn't hear any words but I felt a huge, "Duh!"

(I cringe when the Ascended Masters mimic us with our own flippant human expressions.)

"So what's a Realm Worker," I inquired. Adamus had brought up the subject in the January 28 Keahak session and even suggested I write an article about it.

At this point Adamus took on a more serious demeanor. I'll summarize what he shared with me:

Heaven's Cross is unprecedented. In the other realms they actually call it the Apocalypse rather than Heaven's Cross, but the term Apocalypse has some very scary human connotations based on misinterpretations of the biblical Book of Revelations. Adamus created the term Heaven's (or Heavens) Cross to avoid mass anxiety and create the visual of the various dimensions (heavens) opening up and intersecting. It is the long-prophesized time of the Christos Consciousness on earth. It is happening now due to the appropriate level of light and consciousness in a small but significant number of humans that have chosen to be embodied on the planet at this time.

Adamus made it clear that this is not a "unicorn" event; it is not a woo-woo New Age dream. Instead, it is based on metaphysics and quantum mechanics related to consciousness>energy>light>gravity>reality. It is much more than spiritual phenomena. He cautions that many spiritual teachers and practitioners will miss the importance of the event if they don't understand the underlying metaphysics. They will sell it as a tool for better health, abundance, relationships, healing, spirit communications, etc., which it is not.

It has been known for the past 25+ years that Heaven's Cross was rapidly approaching but it wasn't known until late in 2022 when the actual human date would be. Even when St. Germain announced Heaven's Cross at the Time of the Merlin event in September 2022, he could only say it would be in early 2023. It was at least another month before the date of March 22 was announced.

It's interesting to note that the spring equinox is March 20, two days prior to Heaven's Cross. There are some noteworthy astrological events taking place on March 23, one day after Heaven's Cross. Now that word about the event has gotten out to the spiritual community, there are some that claim the event is indeed on March 23 because of the alignment of the stars. Adamus makes it very clear that it is March 22, and that it is not the result of astrological alignments but rather intensifies the alignments that happen the next day. In other words, Heaven's Cross is the result of consciousness, not astrology. Other spiritual organizations have hopped on the bandwagon and are talking about dates in April and May 2023, but Adamus and the Crimson Council have taken careful calculations and are solid on the March 22 date.

In order for the opening of the veil to occur, there must be enough humans on the planet holding a certain level of consciousness and light. This triggers a series of events that culminate in the opening. The actual opening starts slow (on March 22) and then continues to open at a very carefully calculated rate as to not throw our planet into complete imbalance and chaos. It requires an immense team of angelic beings in the other realms to help maintain this balance as some humans begin to access the other "heavens."

A very important part of this multidimensional effort are humans that are currently embodied on the planet and are working in the other realms in preparation of Heaven's Cross. Many of them (you) may not be aware of their other-worldly work, according to Adamus. They go about their everyday human lives, usually in relative obscurity, far away from the bright lights and egocentric activities of human life. Their (your) role is critical to the balance that is needed to insure the safety of those accessing the other realms, and to maintain a balance on the planet.

Adamus offered this analogy in Keahak: Imagine a new parkway or boulevard is being built through a beautiful area with forests and lakes. Only certain vehicles with special headlights will be allowed to travel the roadway; those without the special headlights won't even know it's there. When the roadway is opened, it will be lined with angelic beings from one end to the other, to greet the multidimensional travelers and insure their safe passage. The parkway leads to a place called the Elysian Fields. It is here that the traveler gets out of their vehicle and takes in the magnificence of the promised land, and where they exclaim, "I am in heaven." It is the land of the soul, of crystalline energies and of grace. They breathe in and absorb their surroundings, all while feeling the harmonic resonance of the Master within. The Master is, of course, the wisdom of all their lifetimes on Earth.

Here is where the Realm Workers come in: Many who travel here will not want to leave. The energies are unlike anything they have experienced as humans on Earth. There is no sense of density and compression. No body aches and pains. No negative memories, only wisdom. No feelings of fear or being unsafe. This is heaven. The traveler will wander about this heaven still able to observe and experience with the human senses of sight, sound, smell, taste and touch, as well as high dimensions senses that now begin to open.

The Realm Workers, who have helped build this parkway to the Elysian Fields, are there to remind the traveler that they can come here any time now, but it is also important to return to human life on Earth. The traveler is reluctant to leave this heaven, but the Realm Worker reminds them that their intent was to come here in human and angelic awareness, and then take the experience and essence with them to Earth. They are reminded by the Realm Workers that they did not come here for their human body to die back on the planet, but to now return to their very-much-alive human body. As they do, they will bring back a taste of their essence as well as a new form of light and crystalline energy. The Realm Workers will help assure that the traveler hops back in their vehicle and returns to Earth, and subsequently brings back a light that has never been present on Earth. They don't need to do anything with this light when they return other than to let it shine upon humanity. It will augment the light and consciousness that is already here.

The Realm Workers have been busy helping to design and build the parkway for the past 25+ years, and then working with the angelic beings to greet those making their early journeys to the Elysian Fields. Most have been unaware of their multidimensional activities other than the feeling that “something” has been going on.

Adamus says the Realms Workers have been an essential part of architecting and then opening Heaven’s Cross. It cannot be done with just non-physical beings on the other side of the veil. There has to be the active participation of spiritually-mature humans in order to keep a proper balance. After all, Heaven’s Cross is about being both human and divine. The participation of the wise human helping to build the parkway and greet the travelers is a key component to the Apocalypse. It only becomes the Apocalypse when the travelers reach the Elysian Fields and then return back to their life on earth as an embodied human.

I’ve asked Adamus many questions about the Realm Workers including these:

Cauldre: Are they aware of the work they are doing in the other realms, the work of Heaven’s Cross?

Adamus: Generally not, other than perhaps in their dream state. Even then, their mind does not properly translate their work in the other realms. They wake up thinking they are dreaming of hard manual work, or toiling with meaningless tasks, or oftentimes trying to break through some type of barrier or wall. This is because they are dealing closely with the effects of the veil – closer than most other humans – and this causes them to forget what they are doing as Realm Workers.

Cauldre: Did they consciously choose to do this, and if so, when?

Adamus: The decision was not made at a human level, rather at a Master level. It was made before their birth in this lifetime, assuming the Apocalypse would occur within their upcoming lifetime. They put their name on a sacred list and said, “Let me know if and when it’s happening so I can go to work.” Most of them had uneventful childhoods, and when they were finally called to service they stayed anonymous and quiet in their human lives because their passion was working in the other realms. They didn’t want to get distracted by heavy or intense human lives.

Cauldre: Much of their work is in the other realms. Will they get a chance as humans to travel between the realms or are they just meant to focus on the other side?

Adamus: They helped build the parkway, so to speak, and they will also be the first to test it before Heaven’s Cross. Most of them will have consciously traversed the realms before March 22. Their human self will suddenly be aware of their work in the Elysian Fields, the 6th Heaven.

Cauldre: What are the attributes of the Realm Workers? How does someone know if this is what they committed a big part of their life to?

Adamus: Generally speaking, they live their human lives in the background. They don’t immerse deeply into careers, family, lovers, or big projects. They tend to be very intelligent and aware of everything around them, but they don't dive into life. They tend to neglect their bodies, they sleep a lot, and they are incredibly sensitive to the harshness of human living. They read a lot, stay away from social activities, and tend to have anxiety. In the end none of this really matters to them because they have an inner knowingness of the work they are doing. Ever since we announced Heaven's Cross they have felt their world spinning round and round, like everything is going to change. They will be traversing the "parkway" beginning in the early weeks of March in preparation for the opening on March 22. The human will feel that something important has been completed in their life without knowing exactly what it is, and may feel their "time" has come and begin preparing to leave. However, myself and other Ascended Masters will be working with them closer than ever to help them understand this is just a beginning for their human self.

Cauldre: Am I a Realm Worker? (the sound of thunderous laughter came once again)

Adamus: You've got to be kidding! Your work has been here on the planet, being a communicator of the messages from Tobias, Kuthumi and me. We come through the veil to you, rather than you crossing the veil to us. Your life is anything but in the background, even though you probably prefer that it was. You can be assured that the Realm Workers will be there for you when you begin taking your journeys to the Elysian Fields.

Cauldre: When will their work be done?

Adamus: For most, it will be within 4-5 months after the Apocalypse begins. The trail will be blazed by then and they can now have awareness of their human and divine selves. They can now begin living their dreams as divine humans on earth, and know their work in the other realms is a success. They will embrace human life in a way few other humans have been able to do so. They will be true living Masters, now with a special badge of honor in their energy field. They will be known as The Graceful Ones.

I end my article in deep gratitude to those of you who have been Realm Workers in this lifetime. I am obviously not one, but I know the commitment it has taken to do the work you've done and still try to stay here on this planet. May you be blessed with awareness of your contributions to Heaven's Cross, and may you traverse the realms with ease and grace.

HEAVEN'S CROSS

Part 2: The Apocalypse

THE HEAVENS REVEALED

From the times of Atlantis to ancient Egypt, from Yeshua until now, humanity has dreamed of access to the divine, of seeing beyond, of mysteries revealed and a lifetime of grace. But the physics of this planet have hidden the doorways and blinded the senses to our true state of being. Now, because of humanity's strong desire for change and your radiant light, an unprecedented level of consciousness allows the shadowing clouds to begin lifting and the veil to begin dissolving. Although the implications go far beyond this planet and physical creation, for humanity it means a quantum change that will evolve into every part of life.

The "Apocalypse," which means "to reveal," was foretold in the Book of Revelations as a time when all the potentials would change and divine would join with human. The seven heavens of Earth are seven states of being that are accessible to embodied humans. While very few have gone all the way, these realms now begin to open as Heaven's Cross unfolds.

Adamus talks about the literal physics of creation, and how the very atomic structures on Earth will be affected by changes in time, space, gravity, and electromagnetics. Even science and human evolution will be altered as research and psychology are touched by what's happening. He also gives very direct and practical advice on how to navigate these changes without pain or imbalance.

This apocalypse or opening of the realms is the core reason for why you're here. It is the time of harvest, when the Christ seed planted so long ago finally bears fruit. This is what you came for, "the very reason you're on the planet right now. Heaven's Cross. The Apocalypse. The Christos consciousness finally coming to Earth. The last big hurrah for Shaumbra."

NOTE: Adamus called for a special free Q&A session near the end of February 2023 for attendees of this Cloud Class. Once registered, go to the Questions tab in the Cloud Class area to send in your question no later than February 10.

SESSIONS

1. Seven Heavens of Earth (1:10:20)

Adamus talks about the true definition of "apocalypse" and why it's finally happening, then discusses how the realms, or heavens, interact and are ready to open, with profound implications. Referring to the Book of Revelations, he explains the seven heavens of the human experience: Body, Mind, Nature, Community, Service, the Elysian Fields, and The Apocalypse.

2. Physics and Guidelines (1:15:39)

Giving a distilled physics lesson, Adamus takes the listener through the steps of creation: consciousness, energy, light, wave-forms, electromagnetics, gravity, time-space and finally physical reality. Heaven's Cross will affect every part of this, including science and human evolution itself. He also gives very practical advice on what you can do to stay balanced and make the most of this extraordinary time.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Apocalypse means to reveal, uncover, open
- Foretold in Revelations, that time is now
- Rewrite your Book of Life beyond the current page
- Physics are changing, science will soon catch up
- Everything is possible
- Be aware, listen, observe – it's why you're here

PROGNOST™ 2023

NEW!

Quantum Weirdness

THE GLUE OF REALITY IS DISSOLVING

Physical reality is made of energy swirling into an atomic structure, then coalescing into molecules and particles due to the observation and participation of the observer. Adamus states that gravity, the glue holding it all together, is now lessening due to rising consciousness on the planet. As the far-reaching effects of this gravitational reduction emerge, things get weird – quantum weird.

The good news is that your divinity, soul, and dreams become far more accessible, and releasing stuck energy from your body, mind and emotions gets much easier. “Moonshots” become feasible, technology speeds up even more, and quantum mechanics demonstrate the act of consciousness that literally creates reality. While life feels in the “crazy zone” for a while, the lessening of gravity also brings freedom, easy manifesting, and a synchronistic life.

This ProGnost 2023 event is closely connected with Heaven’s Cross, which is all about the lessening of physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual gravity. Here, Adamus talks about the physics and metaphysics of these unprecedented changes, and their effects on every part of life on Earth and beyond.

Note: Adamus uses over 80 slides to illustrate his various points. These slides are available as a pdf download on the Welcome tab of the Cloud Class page.

Session 1 (1:12:40)

Adamus begins by sharing many examples of a drastically changing world, noting that the rate of change is quickly going off the charts. And it’s all happening now because of consciousness.

Session 2 (1:11:54)

Explaining the physics of how reality comes into being, Adamus states that everything is held in place by gravity, which is now lessening due to increasing consciousness. This means more freedom, accessibility to the other realms, and “crazy zone” level weirdness. He talks about the effects of this on people, science, nature and the nonphysical realms.

Session 3 (59:39)

After talking about the wonderful effects of reduced gravity on Shaumbra – clarity, easy manifestation, synchronicity, healthier body, joy, creativity and overall ease – Adamus says the most important thing is staying grounded and allowing. In the closing merabh he reminds to stop worrying and planning, which makes gravity tighter, just relax and walk hand in hand with the greatest angel ever... YOU.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Gravity holds reality in place
- More consciousness means less gravity
- Less gravity means more freedom
- Things get very weird in the “crazy zone”
- Everything opens, realms begin to merge
- Your divinity, your YOU-ness is now available

LIVING WITH PASSION

NEXT LEVEL

WITH ALEX FERRARI

CONVERSATION WITH ALEX FERRARI

FILM PRODUCER, AUTHOR, AND CELEBRITY PODCASTER

SHAUMBRA MAGAZINE: Looking through your websites, clearly you are a prodigious creator, and a common denominator appears to be helping people tell their stories and connect with their soul. What's the big picture?

Alex Ferrari

ALEX: I'm interested in sharing good quality information to audiences that generally wouldn't have that information come across their path. With my Next Level Soul show I try to shoot it down the middle, because if you go too far out into the outskirts and get a little too woo-woo, you're going to lose a lot of people. There are plenty of woo-woo channels out there – no pun intended! – but I try to keep it as grounded as humanly possible.

So, we have these really authentic conversations about channeling, mediums, psychic abilities, simulation theory, quantum physics, neuroscience of spirituality and all these kinds of things. I try to bring all this information together so someone will come to a show on the health benefits of mushrooms, for instance, and then go, "What's this channeling thing?" because the show covers so many topics. I can talk to an ultra-athlete about biohacking and how he started at 40 years old; I also talk to rock stars and movie stars and such to bring everybody together. When audiences come in, I'm hoping that people who are searching will find an interview, like with Geoff, and be really transformed by it. I read all the comments and messages about how it's really affecting and helping a lot of people, and that's the main goal of the whole thing.

I just didn't see anything out there being done in the way that I knew I could bring to the space, like with my filmmaking podcast. There wasn't anyone telling the truth in the filmmaking or screenwriting space, and then within a few months I was number one in that space. But this space is – ehh! – slightly larger (he chuckles). It's basically the world. Anybody who wants to know about what happens after you die, or the meaning of life, or how to break through trauma, or how to release anger or pain, or how to change your mindset, all these things are encompassed in the show. I'm just trying to be a conduit for guests like Geoff and others to come in and spread their truth and knowledge to an audience that might not find them otherwise. If you're somebody who's been Catholic all your life, the chances of you finding a channel are slim. But if you find some other topics you're interested in and then see something about channeling, you go, "Well, what is this?" and that's how the investigations start.

SM: I see you as kind of a connecting point, creating a whole network of all this material.

ALEX: That's exactly kind of how I see myself. I see the show mostly as a conduit, a connector.

Before this year is out, we're going to be releasing Next Level Soul Español, where we're dubbing all of our shows in Spanish. Then after Español, we'll probably go into Germany and then Arabic and Russian and other languages. We want to grow out the network of what we're doing and get this message out there. Right now, we translate to 12 languages with automatic closed captioning, and based on that data, Arabic is number one for us.

SM: How did you get interested in this alternative spirituality?

ALEX: I'm a recovering Catholic. I still feel very guilty about it (laughs). But a lot of the stuff that was being taught even when I was in first and second grade didn't make sense to me, so I started questioning things. I left the church looking for another spiritual path, but it wasn't always in the forefront. Then slowly, but surely, friends would give me a book here, a book there. I started to learn and understand about reincarnation. I started understanding karma. I got a book called The Age of Aquarius, which basically talks about religion and how it's created. Your head explodes when you read a book like that.

So, I just started down that path. And as you get older, you start thinking about things a little bit differently. I started meditating heavily about six years ago, an hour or two a day, and that started opening up doors. I read Autobiography of a Yogi and that opened up massive amounts of doors in my world, and I just kept going down that road. And then when a spiritual friend of mine told me, "You've got to open up a spiritual podcast," I'm like, "You're out of your mind. What are you talking about? Why?" I'm not a channel. I'm not a psychic. I'm not a medium. I'm not a guru. I'm nothing. I'm just a filmmaker. And she's like, "No, you need to do it. It's your time, and also, you have three weeks." I'm like, "That's insane." She's like, "Yeah, it's insane for most, but not for you."

Three weeks later, I had a show. I had the podcast, the website built, and guests already lined up, doing one episode a week. Then I got scared, very scared. I started to pull back, because I was afraid of what people would say about spirituality and, like, "Oh, my god, Alex has gone crazy." I had built up this other company in the filmmaking and screenwriting space, and I was terrified I was going to lose everything I'd built. So, I started to pull back until finally in December of 2021, I had a "come to Jesus" conversation and just said, "God, all right. If you want me in, I'm going to go all in on this. I have faith that you're going to guide me through this process, but I'm going to take the leap." And I built this little set and started taking it seriously, doing two episodes a week, which turned into three episodes a week, which is now four episodes a week and more.

The second I did that, the doors swung open. I started getting guests that were unobtainable to me before, and it started to build momentum. The whole show just exploded to where this month we're on track to do two million downloads. We're averaging between 1.5 to two million downloads a month and growing every month. I don't really understand it.

People are starving for this information. I think people are awakening now more than ever because of the way the world is. You know, the pandemic definitely woke up a lot of people to ask questions.

I've understood for a while that this is so much larger than me. I'm a cog in this wheel, and I have to behave as such and do my job. It's not ego. It's the show.

SM: Sounds like it's what you're here to do. When you really committed to it and said, "Okay, I'm going to do this," then it could take off.

ALEX: Exactly. Now I'm at a point where just last week I introduced this show, Next Level Soul, to my filmmaking show, which I was terrified to even tell them about! But I introduced it to them because I had the writer of Ghost, Bruce Joel Rubin. He was a perfect conduit, perfect person for mixing the two worlds. I'm still talking to Oscar winners and big people in the other space, but what really gets me going is having conversations on this side of the fence. Don't get me wrong, when Steven Spielberg shows up one day, I'm going to have a hell of a conversation with him. But until then, speaking to these metaphysical people on the show is so exciting and so filling of my own personal soul.

I'm exposed to 180 hours plus of one-on-one conversations with spiritual Masters, people connected to the other side, channels, mediums, psychics, quantum physicists, all these people, asking them whatever question I want. I'm living my dream every day. Most of the people I reach out to now are saying yes, and I feel that that will grow more and more, because the bigger the people I can get on the show from different walks of life, the better it is for everybody involved. I was able to have interviews from Oliver Stone, who's a very credible person, and big rock stars like Moby and Bruce Dickinson, the lead singer of Iron Maiden on a spiritual show, and Bruce talking about “I channel another energy when I’m singing on stage to 90,000 people.” His fans lost it when he came on! No one had ever asked him spiritual questions before, and he was one of the most interesting human beings I’ve ever met.

SM: In your website you talk about helping people connect with their soul passion. We know a lot of people who have lost their passion or just can’t find it. What advice would you give to someone who wants to be expressive and creative and tell their story, but doesn’t know where to start?

ALEX: You’re talking to someone who chased the dream for 25 years and was very angry for a lot of those years. A lot of trauma happened to me during those years, from almost making a movie with a mobster, to talking to the biggest movie stars in the world, to meeting Batman. But I kept asking myself, “Why do I keep getting so close to my dream, but it’s not happening?” I was good enough to get into the room, talking to these big movie stars, talking to big billion-dollar producers and Oscar winners and things like that, trying to get my projects off the ground over the years, and I’m like, “What’s stopping me? Why am I being tortured like this?”

Looking back, I realized everything I’d gone through was preparing me for this. Everything I went through, it was perfectly designed. At the time, I saw it as a torture, because I wasn’t getting what my ego wanted. And I also had attachment to everything, so if I did something, it was because “this” was supposed to happen.

So, when I finally let go of that and made my first feature with a bunch of friends of mine, I didn’t attach myself to the outcome. I just did it because I wanted to do it. We shot it in eight days for $5,000, then sold it to Hulu and sold it internationally.

So, to answer your question, there’s a few things I would suggest. One, do something that you love to do for the mere fact of doing it, without attachment to the outcome. Just because you want to sing, doesn’t mean that you are going to make a living singing, and that’s okay. The question is, “Do you want to sing?” or “Do you want to be famous for singing?” Or is it, “I only want to sing if I can make a living singing?” You have to ask yourself, “What’s the purpose of the dream that I’m chasing?”

When I launched this whole podcasting thing, I still did the other stuff. This was a side hustle, until it grew to a point where I could say, “I can retire that and do this fulltime,” and that took several years of hustling extremely hard. I didn’t have an outcome, per se, when I started this. I had dreams of what I wanted, but I just kept doing the work, day in and day out, day in and day out. When you start something, you can’t expect results instantly.

SM: So, to distill that, you do your “bread and butter” work, but also pursue what lights you up?

ALEX: Absolutely. There are so many people who think that it’s all or nothing, and that doesn’t have to be the case. You’ve just got to keep doing it in order for those magical moments to occur. When Oliver Stone came to my show, he was on episode four hundred and twenty-five. So, for 424 episodes, I didn’t have an Oliver Stone or anyone even close to that. Now, after Oliver showed up, a lot of doors opened, because people start taking the show a lot more seriously. But it was only because I just kept trying and kept going and kept going and kept going, because I love doing it and I didn’t have a required outcome in place.

Were there frustrations along the way? Of course. I’m a human being. I want more numbers. I want more downloads. I want more this. I want more that. But this whole Next Level Soul experience has shown me that the more you let go and just do the work because you love the work, if it’s supposed to be, things happen. And I promise you it will not happen on your timeline. It never happens on your timeline. Never. Because the power that is guiding you in your life’s journey knows much more than you do and knows better than you do. So you might be frustrated because you’re not getting what your ego wants, but everything’s working exactly the way it needs to work. And if you trust in that, the doors open a lot faster.

Also, to find your passion, ask what would you do for free? If you want to sing, sing. If you want to write, write. You want to be an artist, paint. Whatever really connects with you emotionally where you could do it for hours for free and not even think about money, that’s your passion.

I AM POTENTIALS INTO YOUR SECRET GARDEN – FEATURING KUTHUMI LAL SINGH

Health, happiness, abundance, love. While everyone wants to bring the best potentials into their lives, most people are limited to the probabilities of yesterday. But even in Realization there are new things to learn, choose, sense and experience in the unlimited energy of the soul. In this beautiful “walking story,” Kuthumi describes a Secret Garden in which every potential exists and explains the human sense that can help you find the ones you want.

After staying on Earth for more than 20 years after his Realization, Kuthumi became an expert on living as an embodied Master. Now, he shares deep wisdom about the journey and accessing the potentials that are always available to you. In this humorous and delightful story, he tells of the search that led to his breakdown, the blissful silence of completion, the relationship with his soul and the learning that still takes place after Realization.

SAM'S “BE WELL” MESSAGE A MASTER'S LIFE

Sam, of Tobias and the soul family of To-bi-wah, talks about the ups and downs of his human lifetime. Even as he remembered himself as a Master, Sam also experienced adventure, frustration, love, and heartbreak, all in the fulfillment of the desires of his soul. As his time on Earth draws to a close, Sam offers simple wisdom from the apple orchards, a reminder of why we are here, and a heartfelt invitation to be well.

In this beautiful message, Sam explains when, how, and especially why he will be going home. With the profound implications of the opening of Heaven's Cross, those of us here on Earth need all the help we can get – from all sides of the veil – to stay balanced and grounded. It is Sam's deep commitment to assist us in every possible way.

HEAVEN'S CROSS – PART 1: PREPARING FOR THE OPENING

CHRIST CONSCIOUSNESS
IN A HOPELESS WORLD

Planet Earth has always been isolated from the other realms, causing humans to forget why they are here and blocking the natural flow of divine energies and communication with the soul. This disconnection results in a profound sense of hopelessness, which then causes mental imbalance, depression, addictions, and disease. Now, the opening of Heaven's Cross, a literal physics event that changes the electromagnetics of Earth, brings access to the other realms, Christ Consciousness, sovereignty, and grace.

This first installment of the Heaven's Cross series is in preparation for the actual opening of Heaven's Cross on March 22, 2023. Adamus says the effects of this momentous event will eventually be perceived by science bring a level of change to the planet not seen since the fall of Atlantis. The implications are far-reaching as many extraordinary potentials now become possibilities.

MAKING OF RUDE AWAKENING DOCUMENTING OUR SPIRITUAL JOURNEY

Come join us behind the scenes and dive into the full story of how the Rude Awakening documentary was created. From its humble beginnings to shooting the first trailers, the creation of Rude Awakening was never going to be a linear affair. The Rude Awakening team had to listen to where the project wanted to go and make intuitive decisions along the way as the project grew bigger and more ambitious. But, being humans on this incredible journey, its creators didn't escape getting caught up in the stories, reactions and drama themselves.

Nearing bankruptcy after a two year pandemic, the team lost all hope of ever getting this film made. But, like all good stories, in the final hour a miracle happened, and the film was finished in a way nobody believed was even possible. This is our story about your story.

THE UNFINISHED LIFE

It was Friday afternoon. Adamus had just made his final remark, "It was a – I hate to overuse the word – but amazing gathering of Shaumbra," on our 4-day workshop Masters in Communication. We had just gathered on the little green hill at Villa Ahmyo for group photos. I skipped hugs and goodbyes, and made my way down the stairs, as my partner Tim had come to pick me up.

Our host Scott had graciously offered to take us to the summit of Mauna Kea in his mighty Jeep Wrangler later that afternoon. What a dream come true! Mauna Kea is the highest volcano in the Hawaiian Islands, sacred to the Native Hawaiians. It could also be considered the highest mountain on Earth if you count from its base more than five thousand meters below sea level. I carefully packed my layers for summer to autumn to winter and at 3:30pm, we set off. The weather was the clearest we could ask for. The 2.5-hour drive was stunning, with spectacular changes in landscapes along the way. Scott was an amazing guide for us. When we got to the visitor's center, the unexpectedly crowded parking lot reminded us it was the American Thanksgiving long weekend.

By Kemila Zsange

Everyone is encouraged to spend at least half an hour at the Visitor Centre to acclimate to the altitude. We wandered around the visitor's center and vicinity for twenty minutes before joining the line of jeeps waiting to drive up to the summit. When the journey to the summit and observatories started, the real excitement began—that feeling of being on top of the world, land, water, clouds, and sky. But the very slow pace of traffic started to stress Scott out, as the sun was getting ever lower on the horizon, and we began to think we may miss the sunset. "Well, there will be colors," Scott tried to comfort us, or maybe himself. The sky was ever changing. The clouds below us rolled away in waves. The drive itself was so – I hate to overuse the word but – amazing that, sunset or not, I was already on cloud nine.

Just then, an unmarked left turn appeared, and Scott took it without hesitation. We ended up on a hill surrounded by observatories with no other people, just in time to see the red sun sink into the horizon.

The white domes of the astronomical observatories decorating the mountain-top magically began to open. So did my arms open to embrace the sky as my heart soared. We then drove the short distance up to the summit and stayed until the park rangers came to clear away the tourists so the observatories could do their work, free from the stray beam of a random flashlight or headlight.

Back down at the visitor center we set up chairs and brought out our sandwiches in the picnic area. Scott surprised us by bringing out a spotting scope, through which the new crescent moon revealed its unreal grey texture on the surface in shadow.

We picked another shining star to look at, a planet that seemed to have three moons lining up on its left side. It was Jupiter, we all decided. Then came the time I truly wanted – to sit down and give myself a moment to absorb, admire, and adore the STARS!

That time never came.

To get myself comfortably ready, I decided to go to the ladies' room first. Stepping back out, the dazzling night sky and Milky Way immediately disoriented me. I spun underneath their gaze, while my feet took me to the parking lot. Walking between cars to the picnic area, my feet met a little raised curb. I stepped over the obstacle and, instead of finding a landing place, my foot just went down, deeper, and deeper into nothingness.

I landed on my left hip, palm, and elbow, then rolled to my back. Oh, the stars! Let's get up, my mind said, but my body felt the ache and shock. I would lie there, for just a moment, to catch a breath.

A small group came over. "Are you okay?" a woman asked.

Always. But now that you ask, I want to say no. How did they even know someone fell? It was almost pitch-dark.

"Oh, I heard it. Loud!" the woman said. She came down and gently raised my feet with her hands. "Close your eyes and take some deep breaths," she commanded.

No, I just want to see the stars. But I followed her instruction. She could make a decent hypnotist, I thought. More people gathered, shining their phone lights on my awkwardly dressed body (two pairs of pants underneath a long skirt, bright yellow rain jacket on top; I hadn't come up the mountain planning to be the center of attention).

Thankfully, all the layers gathered at my hip area, creating a cushion for the four-foot fall. While all my attention went to the left side of my body that hit the ground, the next day I discovered my right knee was sprained.

After confirming there were no broken bones, Kona Community Hospital gave me a long knee brace to wear. All my upcoming valley and coastline hikes had to sadly be cancelled – you don't know what you have until you lose it.

Beyond all the new travel adjustments, my biggest regret was still the immediate loss of the opportunity to sit and gaze at the stars. When they found me on the ground, Scott and Tim had decided it was time to head home. Every moment on Mauna Kea was beautiful, but it still felt deeply unfinished.

With no hikes to do, we shifted our focus to beaches. Out of all those listed in the Complete Guide to Big Island Beaches, I picked Anaeho'omalu Bay (A-Bay) beach. The beautifully sandy beach is between the ocean and two ancient Hawaiian fishponds. Two bodies of waters, palm trees dotting the white sand. What could go wrong?

I brought my protective wet shoes, but "forgot" them in the car. Tim insisted that I go out with a boogie board to not put too much strain on my right knee. Soon, I drifted to a coral area that was too shallow to paddle the board, and too jagged to stand up and walk across. I leaned on the board, walking my feet in the water.

Excruciating pain pinched the bottom of my left foot, like hundreds of needles piercing it all at the same time. Ouch! Was something trying to bite me? I raised my foot, but the sharp pain continued.

Finally back at the shore, once again a crowd gathered around me. A woman from Virginia told me I must have stepped on a sea urchin. "There are 18 spines in your foot!" Did someone actually count? I felt utterly helpless. A man from Ottawa kept digging the sand below my foot so the sea water could soak it. A young girl came by to say she heard urinating on the foot would help. A great idea which was dismissed by my quickly assembled care team. "A tweezer, who has a tweezer?" The Virginian woman requested. Tim said nothing and went off, asking everyone on the beach for a tweezer. Should I have hope? Should I curse? Should I panic? Should I stay optimistic? Maybe it meant I needed to slow down. Maybe there's a blessing in it... I could only sit on the beach.

Tim returned empty handed. It turns out nobody goes to a tropical beach with a tweezer in their bag. The Virginian woman tried to pinch the skin on my foot. "No, I don't want to make it worse." Soon she gave up. The pain subsided, or was I just distracted? She suggested that I visit the nearest Urgent Care clinic, which would be closing soon. The Ottawa guy and the Virginian woman's brother used their hands and arms to make a "chair" and carried me to Tim's car – because remember, I had a sprained right knee and couldn't hop. Google told us no Urgent Care clinics were open; it was still the long Thanksgiving weekend. I told Tim we could go back to Kona Community Hospital. After all, I had just set up a patient profile with them two days ago.

Noticing my mouth was very dry and my head buzzing, I remembered someone saying there might be some venom. Maybe I was reacting to it? Was it deadly? Could my body endure the 52-minute drive? I knew I needed to use the power of my mind to ensure the infection stayed on the foot. But what if they need to amputate my foot? I am going to stay on the planet as an embodied master, AND I want to stay with my feet!

"Maybe, you just need to drink some water?" Tim suggested, as he sped through the traffic. What a magic solution for a serious problem!

The guard at the hospital emergency brought me a wheelchair, asking, "May I know what for?" I told him the story.

"I'm pretty sure the nurse is going to tell you the same thing. Just go home and soak your foot in vinegar."

I looked at him. Right, this is Hawaii. It couldn't be that I was the first case of someone stepping on a sea urchin. Maybe he had a point. The doctors and nurses at the emergency room were nice, but if I could do without them, I'd prefer that.

I stayed in Hawaii five more days after A-Bay. With my right knee still sprained and my left foot now hurting, there wasn't much left to do. My biggest regret was that I never had a chance to really enjoy A-Bay beach.

A sudden disruption, vacation unfinished.

"Let yourself be touched," Adamus had invited in our final session of the workshop. But by a sea urchin?! What kind of Master of Communication is that? A sharp pinch is too much of a reminder that I exist.

"So many things happen when you finally leave here," his Merabh voice soothingly echoed in my mind. "You know, you go back to harsh reality..." Yup, so many things happened that life was unfinished for the rest of my stay on Hawaii. Snorkel trips were cancelled; my five swimming suits stayed in my suitcase.

That first night at home, I slept 14 hours straight. Early the next morning, I was enjoying a very engaging and meaningful dream. My hypnotherapy mentee Candice was leading a group of teenagers. They came to a big building where Obama lived, and Candice was demonstrating to the group how they could get what they desired when they expressed themselves clearly and confidently. She called Obama to the window and expressed her need for him to meet her group. Obama came down. I knew it was time for this young lady to teach me something.

I walked toward the group and a nice musical tone rose. But the tone was repetitive. "It must be Tim's alarm o'clock. How annoying! But no, I am not going to wake up yet. I can either go on in the dream pretending it's a soundtrack for me, or I can suspend the dream until the ring tone exhausts itself." I waited and waited. The tone finally stopped, but I forgot where I was in the dream. Then my own alarm o'clock sounded. It was time to get up for work after the vacation.

Dream unfinished.

How can I ever start a new chapter when the old chapters are not even finished?

It seems the question is an oxymoron. I don't need to start a new chapter; a new chapter starts for me. I don't need to move on in life; life moves me on, obviously. Damn it.

A memory surfaced. When I was a kid, I saw life as an experience. I told my friends life was not for anything, and there was no meaning but experience. "Therefore, everything is it, because everything is an experience."

"What if things don't go my way? That's bad," they said.

"Then you get to experience something else. You will never stop experiencing something. No matter what happens, it's impossible not to experience anything. And that's the point of life, to experience what comes."

"What if I do a crime and go to the jail?"

"Then you experience being in a jail. You may even like it! It doesn't have to be bad. It's life's experience. Everything is meant to be an experience. No experience is better than another when you go through it. Only your human standards make you suffer or not." I said it so firmly that I surprised myself. And yet it was extremely comforting to my child-self at the time to realize I could never fail because no experience is above or below another. And whatever came my way, I could choose how to experience it.

THE ATLANTEAN DREAM IS IN THE MAKING

The first session about hopelessness filled me with hope. It filled me with Joy, with a clear picture of what's happening. To me, this was a confirmation of where we are going... Merging us into Wholeness, not oneness, in ourselves.

This is the change we have been waiting for. We are not going to Heaven after we die; Heaven is coming to us, here and now, not to penetrate our realm or in any way save us but to merge with us in this beautiful way. This is a "workshop" you do not want to miss.

~ Iam Jazie

WHEN HEAVENS CROSS

I was skeptical at first. I felt into the message about the Heavens Cross during the Merlin event, and I wasn't sure what to think/feel about it. The human was complaining... "how many steps on this staircase to heaven", "oh no, not another project...", "I'm just so tired." But then I remembered to go to the Angels peak. And I sat there for a while. And I remember how in the past things that didn't make sense now do. I learned to trust Tobias and Adamus. And I find all those materials very supportive... that is why I am still here. My life is changing, expanding. All in all, this is a wonderful material, and I can't wait for more.

~ Iwona Wirkus

A BEAUTIFUL PREPARATION FOR THIS BIG EVENT!

I liked the statements about the fact that nothing is forever except consciousness and that Heaven's Cross is the second coming. In so many talks about the flow, now it is about the flow with the Master and with who we are. I recommend this material for the clarity and the ease it can bring regarding such important event coming for all of us and humanity.

~ Florin Mandiuc

PREPARE TO BE READY WHEN HEAVENS CROSS

Have you been feeling tired, sleepy, and weary for no apparent reason? You might have been contributing your energy to this grandiose work in the other realms which may have made you even more sensitive and fragile in the physical. The subtext is as clear and straightforward as the message itself: "The change is coming; you better get prepared, or else..." To ensure that this opening between realms goes as smoothly as possible, we might want to prepare ourselves in style: listen very carefully to what Adamus has to share in these classes about Heaven's Cross as well as in other sessions, release everything that is outdated transmuting it into free energy that can serve us in a new way during this upcoming transition, and make sure we've stocked up on the essentials and have everything we need - wisdom, courage, and a lifetime supply of Fukitall.

~ Anastasia McMillan

THE CRITICS CORNER

YOUR POTENTIALS KNOW

For years I've understood that one simply can't make the wrong choice. That I will simply have one experience or another. That clarity was life changing for me. A "higher level" understanding is that when we choose potentials (knowingly or unknowingly I would presume), we can't get that wrong either. As Kuthumi's soul explains to him, we can pick anything, and it doesn't really matter because every potential knows exactly what we truly want. THAT is the gem in this Master's Pause for me.

~ Kathleen Haws

TOUCHING, DEEP AND LIGHT

There is such a wonderful lightness in the stories Kuthumi tells. Like being taken to a place where everything is easy and simple, and at the same time being wrapped in love and softness. I hadn't seen much of the session before I sat with tears in my eyes. Actually, it is not the words, but the energy he is conveying. It goes so deep within. He asks us to imagine our own secret garden. Then go into it and explore it. It was so deep, kind of like coming home to Me. I sat crying after the session had ended. The rest of the day, I was like walking beside myself, feeling strange in my head. Something truly happens when listening to this Master's Pause, and it feels like this was just the beginning of it, more will unfold.

~ Anne Maribo Andersen

REMINDED OF THE BEAUTY OF LIFE

Have you chosen life, to live this morning when you got up? Did you take a deep breath with "Yes, I want to live life fully and enjoy it!" Have you ever thought of how important your attitude to life is? Is your day filled with probabilities or is it potentials you see ahead of you?

The magic of life is shown in Kuthumi's story with a beautiful meadow that shows up suddenly during his walk in Tuscany, Italy. We walk with Kuthumi and are presented of the beauty and all the potentials present here. It is really an uplifting and wonderful experience that can be taken with us in our current life today.

~ Finn Andersen

A TIMELY GEM

I must admit, I didn't have the highest expectations for I Am Potentials. Kuthumi telling his story again? Well, how wrong I was, hahaha, for I haven't heard it from this perspective. And when he takes us down memory lane to his first encounter with his own 'secret garden' of all potentials, then I'm genuinely and deeply touched – and so perfect right now as I prepare for Heaven's Cross! The part about making choices – wow, brilliant! Thank you Kuthumi for creating this downloadable and affordable gem of a product. The quantum weirdness of this shift makes all this support precious beyond words.

WHY DO I KEEP FEELING UNWORTHY?

THE LAST HURRAH OF SUFFERING

Dear Master, why can't I shake the nagging feeling that I need to be helping others or always be there for my family or do something important to feel worthy? And even when I do it, it still doesn't feel right?

Because it occupies your mind. It makes you feel good about yourself. You think you're doing the right thing helping others. You stepped out of that role when you stopped being an energy holder for the planet, when you started truly awakening. And now it's about you. You are the cause for yourself (...)

There shouldn't be anything in your life that's more important than your freedom and your enlightenment. Not your job, not your family, not your children, not your health, not your status, not any awards on your chest.

Wouldn't it make me kind of a psychopath if I stopped caring and feeling empathy for others because I stopped "suffering"?

I'm not saying not to do it, but don't put it before you. It's not to say don't take care of (them). But take care of them as a Master.

There's no compromising. It doesn't matter how many bad words or buckets of water or pounds that you gain or years that you put on your age or bad relationships or lack of money. None of it matters other than the freedom... but suffering cannot coexist with freedom within a person, within a community, within a planet. It simply can't.

Freedom with energy, freedom with one's Self, the sovereignty. I say this because it's going to be one of the most difficult things that you're going to encounter that it's very difficult for these two things to coexist – suffering and freedom.

Well, it's not like I'm suffering. That sounds a bit too harsh. I just feel out of sorts and maybe a little unworthy...

Suffering – and I use that term broadly – it means a lot of things: fear, guilt, shame, of course. It means a lot of different things. Call it what you want – pain, suffering, guilt, remorse, lack of self-worth – it's all the same thing. It's all suffering.

And, by the way, you're really good sufferers. All of you, good sufferers. You've done a really good job with it. Some of you have taken it to the extreme, but that was part of the game.

But didn't I free myself from all of that with everything I've done in these past many years?

(There is) this whole dynamic: part of you (is) becoming totally free, and there's still some of the old suffering energy and consciousness. And the two can't coexist. So, what's going to happen? You have that free part coming in, but you still have the suffering part. It knows it's on its way out, but it's resisting.

It still believes there has to be some degree of suffering.

Just feel what that dynamic is like, what it's going to do in your body and even in your mind, and ultimately that they can't coexist.

If I'm aware of this "suffering" and let go of it, why is it still lingering? Why doesn't it just go away?

I generalize here, it's not meant this way for everybody (...) but (suffering is putting up) its last hurrah, its last fight. It's going to insist that you have to hold on to some of it, so it's going to rise up within you, within some experiences in your life.

And the suffering is going to try to tell you – let's just call it the 'suffering aspect' – it's going to try to tell you that you have to have it, you're not worthy to be without any suffering, and some of you are going to believe it.

Aspects are really good at tricking you, because, well, they are you. They know all your vulnerabilities, your weak spots and everything else.

So the suffering is going to try to hang on, and when it realizes that you're going to call its game, you're going to recognize that it's just an aspect, then it's going to try to plead with you, beg with you. It's going to do the "Poor me. I'm just this little suffering aspect and, look, you're trying to throw me out."

It's going to try to work on your sympathies and your emotions. It's going to try to make you feel guilty, and it really knows how to make you feel guilty.

FROM LIMITATION TO LIGHT BODY

Enlightenment is easy. The challenge is staying embodied on the planet during and after Realization, because the adjustments are hardest on the physical body. Therefore, this first installment in the Master's Life Series is all about the changes our biology is going through as the light body comes in. Adamus talks about the actual physics of this transformation and shares the story of the transfiguration of Yeshua, or Jesus. ("I was there, watching," he says.) To help the trust and allowing of this natural process, he guides a profound journey of re-experiencing your very first birth into biology. Then, with this visceral understanding of physical incarnation, your rebirth into the light body becomes a much more tangible potential.

Until now, our body's intelligence has been focused on the very narrow spectrum of energies that make up physical reality. It has learned to survive, thrive and evolve, becoming quite resilient as it rebuilds itself at every incarnation. However, within every cell a place has always been held open for a higher spectrum of energy, what we now call the light body. As this energy comes in, it opens the Master Sense, the ability to be aware on many, many different levels and realities. Going through this change presents tremendous challenges to the physical body. But, in its wisdom, our biological intelligence continues to learn and adapt as we simply allow the transfiguration of the human body.

Adamus says it is much like completely rebuilding your entire car – while you're in it hurtling down the road at top speed. He says we're going into polymorphosis, becoming many at the same time. It is a huge transformation, and we're feeling it in our body tissues, organs and bones. He offers helpful reassurance of what's going on, encourages us to trust this natural process, and leads several profound experiences into our own personal transfiguration.

Introduction (5:24) – With Geoffrey and Linda Hoppe

Session 1 – Rebirth (1:09:03)

From the very beginning of our physical existence a space has been held open in every cell to receive the crystalline energies of the light body. As these changes take place, they have very real psychological and biological effects. It is time for a whole different awareness of your body. Adamus also talks about birthing, then takes listeners on an incredible journey of revisiting your very first birth into physical matter.

Session 2 – Biological Intelligence (58:47)

With its biological intelligence, the body has learned well how to sustain and evolve, how to live, function, die and rebirth itself, again and again, picking up attributes from the bloodline as well as mass consciousness. Even death is the biology's intelligence taking a rest in order to re-collect and continue itself. Adamus says we are at an "interphasial" stage, like water shifting from liquid to solid as it freezes, a natural process but disconcerting to the biology.

Session 3 – Light Body (1:11:11)

Now that you are allowing in a whole new energy spectrum, everything is changing. How do you keep your balance? It is about living in the "and" and allowing, and truly enjoying the things you love about human life, because you'll take them with you into enlightenment. "Love the life you have right now."

Session 4 – Allowing (46:09)

This Transfiguration really is happening, but you must expand the senses in order to perceive it. The human is used to being on a journey, going out to explore, but now it is about realizing that the journey comes to you. In a beautiful merabh of allowing, you're invited to open the senses and allow the body's intelligence to relax and trust.

Session 5 – Transfiguration (56:47)

Adamus tells the beautiful story of Yeshua's transfiguration and how his experience in receiving the light body is exactly what is waiting for all who allow. There are challenges, yes, but your expanded awareness will bring a whole new perspective to any "problems" you may have. Enjoy this profound experience of deeply allowing your own transfiguration.

PROMISES, PROMISES

Orion Nebula

THE ANOINTED ONE.
THE MESSIAH.
THE SECOND COMING.
THE RAPTURE,
DAY OF JUDGEMENT,
END OF THE WORLD,
ARMAGEDDON.

I grew up hearing about the many promises of God to save “his people.” and warnings that I was living in the end times. The Bible is full of stories about the destruction of various populations that didn’t live up to God’s expectations, but always with promise of a redeemer who would rescue and reward the faithful. My family’s theological discussions included condescending chuckles about the Jews who thought the Messiah was going to save them from the Roman occupation, when we know it was really about the salvation of their souls. Then there were the poor disciples who thought Jesus was going to return in the next few years (because “there are some standing here who will not taste death” before he returned) and went to their graves unsatisfied. The church I grew up in literally arose from a “Great Disappointment” about the Second Coming. Having worked out a prophecy that Jesus was going to descend to Earth on October 22, 1844, many of the faithful sold their belongings and waited expectantly for a cosmic event that never happened.

By Jean Tinder
Content Manager

Theologians went back to the drawing board and decided that Jesus had actually moved from the outer chamber of the heavenly temple into the Holy of Holies on that date, where he was now busy judging the faithful and preparing for his return to Earth riding on a cloud and surrounded by angels.

Throughout the first 20 years of my life, expectation was high that Jesus would come at any moment. Sometimes I gazed into the sky wondering if perchance “that” cloud might be the one, imagining what it would be like to see this wondrous event taking place before my own eyes. The faithful would then be “caught up in the air” to be with him, riding back to heaven on this magical cloud, while the rest of humanity would be abandoned for Satan to toy with. My parents even showed us an image of the Orion Nebula with the assurance that it was the “doorway of heaven” through which Jesus would pass through on his way to Earth.

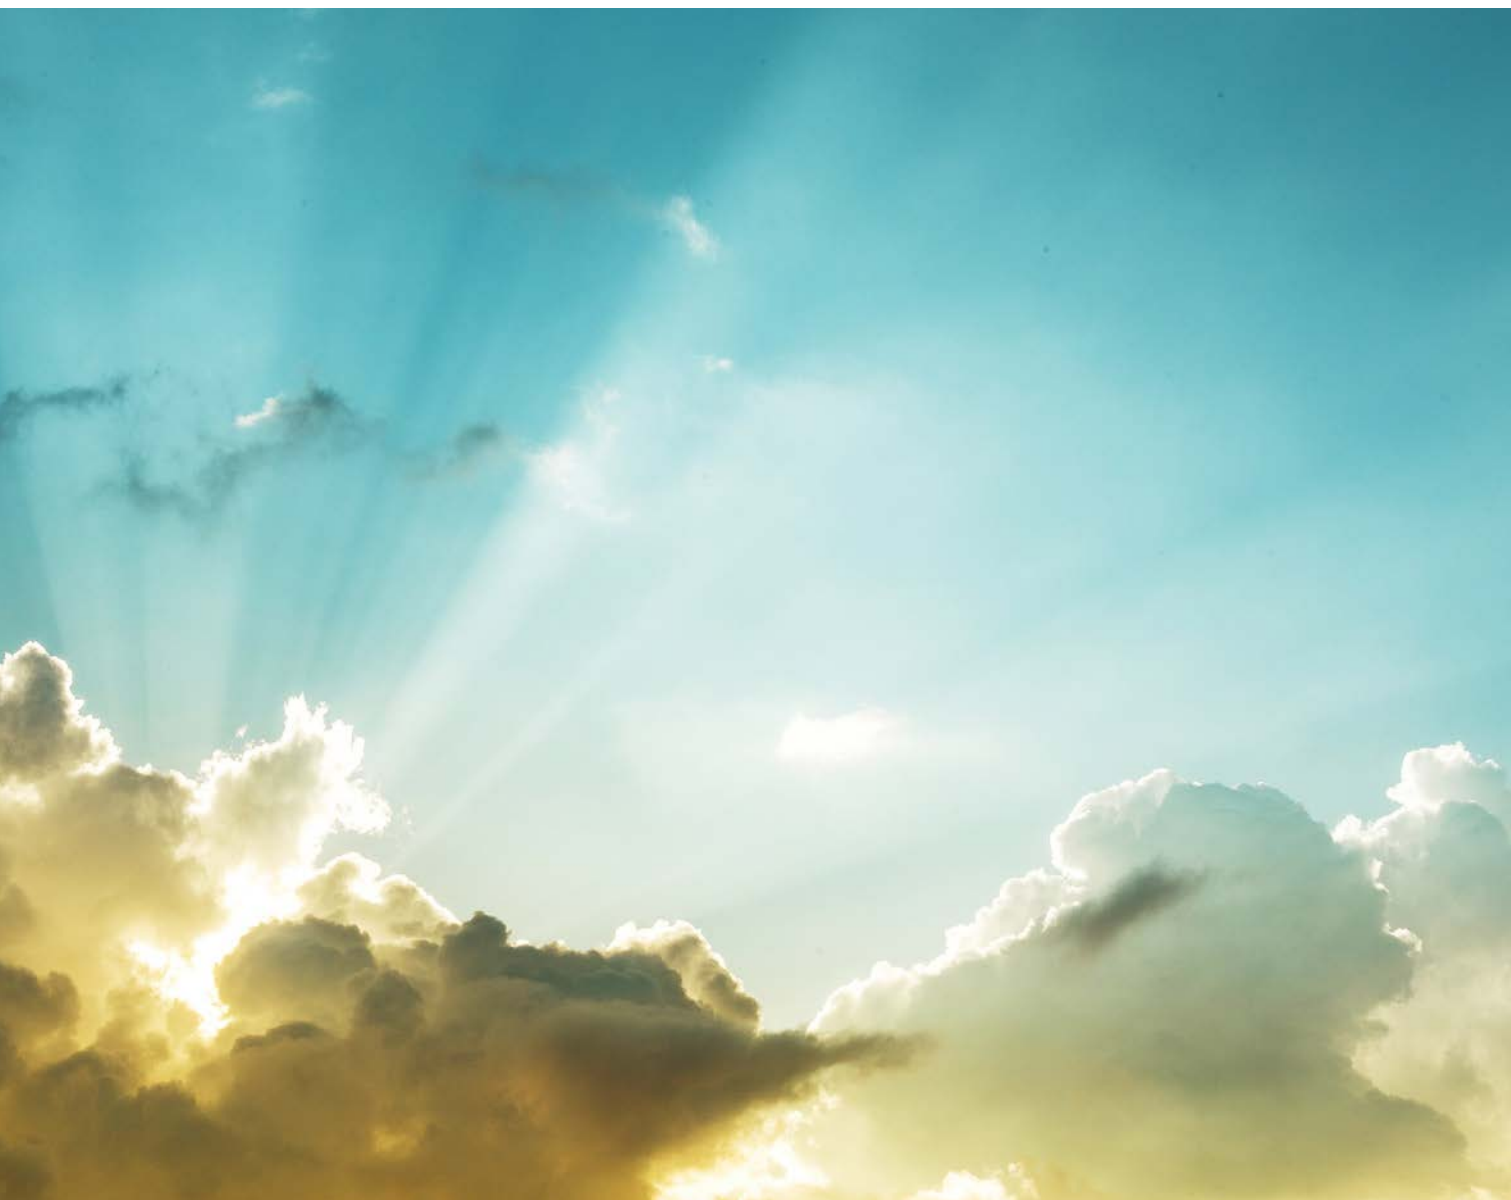

It was all very hopeful to a child growing up in poverty, isolation, and strict rules, but at some point, logic began to filter in and I had questions. Part of the prophecy was that “every eye shall see him,” but (most of) humanity has since figured out that the Earth is not flat. So how would it be possible for everyone to see a single event at the same time? Maybe it would be broadcast on TV or maybe God would work a miracle so everyone could see it in their part of the world. But more and more questions came up, and with the unsatisfactory answers I received, the time came to admit to myself that this grandest of all miracles – the coming of God himself to my lowly world – was a myth. It was magical thinking indulged in by simple and ignorant people, like those who used to believe the Sun orbited the Earth.

As my beliefs and experiences evolved, I came to a new understanding of this “second coming.” It was the clear and compassionate Christ Consciousness finally manifesting in the hearts and minds of humanity. That’s what Jesus was really trying to get across anyway; it just took us a couple thousand years to “get it.” As for the other realms and stuff like seeing God and angels, that would have to wait until I died. It was a little like finding out Santa Claus isn’t real; kind of sad, but a necessary part of growing up. Still, I felt a twinge of sympathetic irony every time I heard about another doomsday cult whose followers were convinced of some big cosmic event on a date that came and went. It was always good for a chuckle in the media, then forgotten as just another in a long line of hopeful delusions. (There are even Wikipedia pages documenting the many predictions of the Second Coming and apocalyptic events!)

Now comes a new promise: Heaven’s Cross.

Please understand, I’m generally in total agreement with Tobias, Adamus and Kuthumi. Their teachings have changed my life and my very beingness. They give words to things I know deep in my heart but have trouble expressing, and have helped me realize self-love and compassion at a depth of which Yeshua would approve. I have released untold limitations, integrated countless stuck aspects, and the dragon pounces at any remaining whiff of guilt or shame. The level of joy in my life is off the charts and, since tomorrow is usually a lot like yesterday, it continues unabated. I am content, finally enjoying and truly living the life I have created, instead of wishing it would get better.

Salvation is by my own hand these days; I have no need of an outside savior, rescuer, or cosmic event. When issues arise, I know who created them (me), who's responsible (also me) and who can fix them (only me). The world? I see – not just conceptualize but really FEEL – the divine within every other human, whether they see it in themselves or not, and I know they'll remember eventually. It is inevitable, they cannot remain stuck forever, and I deeply know that all is truly well.

So, what about Heaven's Cross? I understand why my human is a little leery of yet another promise. And surely St. Germain will forgive me for standing back a little as I wonder how it'll all play out. I notice a lot of Shaumbra eagerly awaiting a magical day and pinning all their hopes and dreams on this event, certain that everything will soon be better. I also see many Shaumbra with reservations, not quite sure what all the hubbub is about, and feeling skeptical of yet another promise. I totally grok both perspectives.

Personally, at a human level, I don't know what to expect. I've put in my share of questions for Adamus* and am helping prepare for the webcast event on March 22. I'm all in, as always, but what's it truly about, for real?

One thing that's been stirring is a feeling of "preparation," an inner drive to clear out old clutter, finish projects that have been languishing, and tie up loose ends of life here and there. Curiously, a lot of other people seem to be doing the same, each in their own way. But I don't feel like waiting for a particular date or event to take care of myself or reorient my life. I am the BOSS (Being of Sovereign Service – thanks for that, Geoff!) of myself and my life and there's no reason to delay taking charge. (I mean really, if anybody is waiting for some magical future date for their life to finally work out, another Great Disappointment is surely in the works.)

However, I've had enough glimpses of my Self and heard enough notes of the sweet song of my Soul to know that more would be, well, heavenly. Will Heaven's Cross bring me closer to my Self? Bring it on! Will it make that divine connection easier for everyone else to access? I surely hope so. Will it be as dramatic as Jesus sailing down to Earth in all his glory? I doubt it. But feeling my own Self in the full knowing of my original creative splendor would be most welcome. Adamus used to ask his audiences, "How will you know when you're realized?" I never got the mic for that question, but my answer was "When I no longer forget my Self and who I really am." If that's the promise of Heaven's Cross, I'll take it. And it's no small thing.

I recently read a very interesting book called Application of Impossible Things. The author tells of getting blown up by a roadside bomb in Iraq and what she learned during the resulting out-of-body experience. It's not a typical "near death experience" but rather a glimpse into the workings of reality and how we create our lives, lessons, and experiences. In fact, it strikes me as a personal account of how "Adamus physics" actually function, and the author continues to be able to reconnect to that specific knowing at will.

It has the ring of truth, but at a level that, to me, is almost purely conceptual. Perhaps, as Heaven's Cross opens, I too will be able to access such deep knowings – hopefully without needing a dramatic accident – and bring that wisdom into my everyday human life.

Whatever Heaven's Cross means, I remain open and eager, ready to experience every moment of life fully, however it unfolds. Rather than the Apocalypse being the end of the world as we know it, I prefer to think of it as the AND of the world, where everything becomes true because access is no longer restricted. As a creator, what could be better than being All that I Am, here and now?

Attendees of Heaven's Cross Part 2: The Apocalypse are invited to send in questions for a session with Adamus by February 10. More information can be found on the Cloud Class page.*
